It will be a surprise to the country that Vennor has guessed right again regarding the weather. The biggest blunderers will once in a while hit the the mark.

Already they are talking of Governor Cullom for president in 1884. The fact that luck has never deserted him brings his name before the public.

A jury has been empanneled to investigate the Newhall house calamity. They will probably know no more about it when they get through than they do now.

The fact that there are twenty-nine senatorial candidates in Nebraska, shows that there are no well-grounded fears that the crop of political candidates will soon die out.

As yet there has no effort been made to get through the legislature a prohibitory amendment resolution. The result of the election last fall suggests that there should be no more contributions made in that way to the success of the democratic party.

The month of January will go down in history as a memorable one for fatality to life and destruction to property by fire and other disasters. Our telegraphic columns continue the story of death and destruction that began early in the month.

There is a revival of the discussion of postal telegraphy in congress and it is announced that Senators Sherman and Edmunds are in favor of the system. If congress wants to do a good thing for the public, it cannot do better than adopt the postal telegraphy. If it is both practical and cheap in England, it can be made that practical and cheap in this country. A few lines should be built to test its utility.

There will be universal regret that death has taken away Gustave Dore, the celebrated French painter. He dashed off his drawings and paintings with marvelous rapidity, not spending more time over a yard of canvas than some other great painters would over an inch. His industry was hardly equaled by that of any artist of modern times. He was at it night and day, and astonished the world by the multiplicity of his productions. He was only 51 years of age.

They are still balloting in Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Colorado, for United States senators. In Michigan and Minnesota, the outlook for the republicans is not at all flattering. Of course a republican will be elected in each state, but not a Ferry or a Windom. Whenever the legislature of such states kicks against such able and faithful men as Ferry and Windom, they kick themselves.

A special telegram from Madison to the Milwaukee Sentinel, says that Chief Clerk Carr, pursuant to the resolution of Mr. Grubb, inquiring by what authority he had placed stationery on the member's desks, made his explanation this morning by claiming to have conferred with the chief clerk of the senate and arrived at the conclusion that sufficient stationery should be provided for the transaction of business, according to the constitution. No debate ensued, as Speaker Finch ordered it spread upon the journal without reading. The entire explanation is regarded as an attempt to shirk responsibility by citing a precedent.

It is said that the edition of the Wisconsin blue book will be 8,000, the largest ever before issued. This important manual can be much improved, and we hope it will be done. It is a good thing now, but it can be made much better without any additional expenditure of money. There are 100 pages devoted to legislative assemblies. They will have to stop publishing these sometime and the right time is to stop now. There will have to be some curtailing done or the book will soon become too cumbersome for convenience. A little judgment on the part of the compiler will enable him to put a good deal of useful matter in the blue book without making the volume to unwieldy. As an illustration of what can be done in this direction the compiler is referred to the New York Tribune almanac.

There has been a good deal said lately regarding the motives of General Grant in favoring the restoration of Fitz John Porter. Grant joined the democratic party in this strange movement, and for what reason no one could rightly conjecture. But his latest attempt to tickle the democratic party is that of urging the president to appoint General Joseph E. Johnson, formerly of the confederate army, to the position of commissioner of the district of Columbia, and in answer to this, the Chicago Journal says: "All of which, taken in connection with other symptoms, would seem to give color to the report that the great commander would not decline the democratic nomination for the presidency in 1884, and that this is what he is driving at. But we do not want to believe this of him, unless we shall have to."

The New York Tribune almanac for 1883 is filled with information of a political, statistical, financial and commercial nature. Its tables of election returns, exports and imports, bank earnings and dividends, currency, immigration, illiteracy, etc, have been compiled with the greatest care, and no pains spared to make them correct. Lists are given of the members of the cabinet, the principal executive and judicial officers, and members of the present congress and of the next so far as elected, the list of members of the house being complete. A brief but comprehensive abstract of the laws passed at the first session of the present congress, and a synopsis of the party platforms of 1882 serve to give additional value to what is one of the most convenient and reliable of our reference annuals.

A MURDEROUS MOTHER.

An Awful Tragedy Enacted in Milwaukee.

An Insane Woman Butchers Her Three Helpless Children.

Attempt of the Miserable Female to Kill Herself---The Heart Broken Father.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 24.—"A woman has murdered her three little girls," was a telephone message received at the police headquarters in this city shortly before noon yesterday. At a quarter after 12 the patrol wagon returned, bringing a Polack woman named Lena Chewanik (given by some as Zimbrick), living at 466 Sixth street. Her hands were smeared with blood, and the front of her dress was dyed in gore. A satanic smile played about her mouth, and her whole appearance was that of an insane person. She was fair-haired, young, and her features were not repulsive. She is about five feet three inches high. Over her head was a bed quilt, and when she had been placed before the fire in the woman's ward, she told a part of her story in broken German. She stated that her husband, John Chowanik, was employed at the Milwaukee Bridge company's works, and the patrol wagon was accordingly dispatched for him. The children, she said, were all girls, aged respectively 3½ years, 18 months, and 4 months, old. When asked how she murdered them, she said she stabbed one in the breast, and another in the shoulder. They cried but little, as she made quick work of the butchery. She smiled as she pronounced the last words. The woman used a draw shave and two small carving knives. With the former she shaved the flesh off the children's bodies, and with the latter she stabbed and disemboweled them. While their bodies were shockingly mutilated, the heads were untouched. When asked what had caused her to do so fearful a deed, she replied: "I read it in the book." Her insanity is in the religious form, and she thinks she has made a great sacrifice. She kept smoothing back her hair with her bloody hands, and looked at the crimson stains and smiled. Her eyes had a wild look. The sight was so terrible that the officers turned away sick at heart.

While the patrol-wagon was gone for the unfortunate husband several reporters visited the tenement-house where the butchery occurred, and were appalled at the sight presented to their gaze. Passing through an alley from Sixth street, and entering a basement room in the rear of the building, the floor of which was flooded with water, on a tossed and tumbled bed, bespattered with blood, lay the three bodies. No more shocking sight could meet the eye. The little ones were stabbed, hacked, chopped, disemboweled, and their arms and legs severed from the frail bodies. A carpenter's drawing-knife and two small-sized carving or butcher knives had been used in their slaughter. The names of the children were Anna, Clara and Helena Compirek. The eldest lay on the bed stark naked, with three stabs through the heart, made with one of the knives. The body was cut, hacked, and dismembered, and presented a revolting appearance. The second child lay a little apart from the other, with the lower portion of the body horribly cut. Great masses of flesh had been clipped from the hips and abdomen with the drawing-knife. The youngest, a sweet child, as were also the other two, had both arms and legs cut from the body, and was otherwise mutilated. All of the bodies were more or less besmeared with blood. According to the neighbors, the ages of the children were 5 and 3 years, and 14 months. A Mrs. Kroddick, who lives in the rear of the Compirek house, states that she happened to go into the apartment where the murder was committed, and there saw not only the three murdered children on the bed, but found the murderess in the act of hanging herself to the knob of an adjoining door with a strip of cotton cloth. The knob of the door to which she was hanging was only about three feet from the floor. Mrs. K. cut her down and asked her why she had committed the crime. Her reply was that people who live in the world have trouble always, but when dead their troubles are ended. It would seem that after committing the unnatural crime she took pails of water and flooded the floor, to remove the stains of blood, it is supposed. The room where the children lay was a small one and quite dirty. It contained a child's crib, a bed, a stove, and some cheap furniture. Adjoining was another apartment, evidently used as a sitting room. To the right was another room, a small, dark bed room in which hung some recently-washed clothing. The sitting room was cold and cheerless, and contained a center table, while on the walls hung a picture of the Savior and one of the Madonna.

The husband, John Compirek, is a machinist by trade. He is of medium height and about 32 years of age. He told the reporters that his wife got up about 6 o'clock in the morning, and he observed that she acted strangely. She commenced to get breakfast, and then took two prayer-books and went up-stairs and commenced to pray. He requested her to hurry up the breakfast and she said she could not until she had finished reading the prayer-books. He ate his breakfast and left the house for the shop at about 6:30. The children were all in bed and asleep when he left. In regard to his family, he stated that he married his wife in Bohemia, and came to this country about three years ago. Ever since his arrival in this country they have had trouble, as there has been considerable sickness among the children.

In answer to a question as to whether or not his wife had ever shown any signs of insanity previously, he replied that she had not, but then recollected about Christmas time she had read something in a paper that seemed to have had a great effect on her.

Yesterday afternoon the woman was removed to the county jail. While in the station a policeman was detailed to watch her, as it was feared that she would again make an attempt to end her life. Her husband refused to go home, saying he could not bear to see the sight, and he sat behind the stove in the station sobbing, with his head resting on one hand. As the officers were taking her through the station she saw her husband, and drawing away from the officers she walked over to him and smiled. A few minutes consultation was held in Bohemian between them. She told him what she had done, and he asked her why she had done it. She said the prayer book said she must do it. A man was detailed to watch her at the jail. The husband was given his dinner at the station.

THE CIMBRIA.

The Death of the Faithful Officers---Why the Sultan's Captain Heard No Cries.

HAMBURG, Jan. 24.—According to the statement of another survivor of the disaster to the steamship Cimbria, the Cimbria's lights were all burning properly. The breach made by the collision was so great that the Cimbria immediately lay over, with a portion of her deck under water. The thirty-nine persons brought into Cuax Haven had been occupants of two boats. The other seventeen persons saved were brought in by the Theta.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Proofs of the Hamburg papers received here show that the Cimbria was struck forty feet from her bow. After making the breach the Sultan scraped along the Cimbria and completely rolled up her iron plates. It is evident that the blow must have been a tremendous one. The papers printed a brief report of the statement made by the Sultan's captain before the British consul, giving the part laying the blame on the Cimbria in large type, with notes of exclamation. One of the boats rescued by the Theta contained thirty-eight persons, the other only nine. The latter had been tossing about nine hours and was water-logged. All the occupants could do was to keep themselves from being washed away by grasping the thwarts. The statement concerning the deaths of Capt. Hanson, who was seen on the bridge to the last and of the first officer, who was soon swimming after the Cimbria had sunk, concludes with the words: "Treu bis zum tode!"—"Faithful until death!"

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—A dispatch from Hamburg, dated yesterday afternoon, to the agents of the Hamburg Steamship company in this city, says: "No more of the Cimbria have been landed here. Four of the steamers that went to the rescue have not yet returned. We hope that sailing vessels passing westward have picked up some of the people that were on the ship."

A gentleman connected with a steamship company, said yesterday afternoon: "I think the saved have all been accounted for. It was freezing when the Cimbria went down, and the persons in the water were speedily chilled to death. I believe the carnival of death was over in five minutes. Hence my credence to the story told by the captain of the Sultan, that he heard no cries for help. People so suddenly immersed in icy water under such terror are not able to cry out very loud, and, if the Sultan was 100 yards away from the victims, the feeble cries for help would have hardly been heard, especially as the people on the Sultan were themselves panic stricken, and fearful of the result to that steamer."

The Hamburger Nachrichten says the captain of the Sultan, in his official statement, says before the fog set in he had been going at nine knots an hour, and during the fog reduced the speed to four knots, the lowest rate of speed consistent with keeping steeringway on the vessel. He neither heard nor saw any kind of signals until, suddenly, at a distance a little more than two ship's lengths, the Cimbria's green light appeared. He immediately, in accordance with the rules of the road, endeavored to give way. He thought he should be able to get clear, when some incorrect steering occurred aboard the Cimbria, and suddenly he saw the red light of another steamer. (It should be remarked here that probably the Cimbria's red light was displayed by the alteration of her course.) Almost simultaneously with the appearance of the light he felt the shock. During the time the leak of his vessel was repairing he constantly gave signals by a blue light and blowing the steam whistle. When the repairs had been effected he approached as nearly to the scene of the collision as he could without endangering his own vessel. Owing to the dense fog he saw nothing. He waited about until 8 Friday morning. As a proof of the correctness of his statement he points to the lateness of the time at which he arrived at Cuxhaven. It is considered the great point in the official investigation will be to prove the accuracy of this statement. According to the statement of persons intimately acquainted with the captain of the Sultan, both he and his first officer are thoroughly competent and careful sailors, and specially noted for the maintenance of strict discipline.

The scenes on the Cimbria after she had been struck are described by survivors as terrible in the extreme. One red Indian brandished his tomahawk before an officer of the steamer and had to be disarmed. The tumult on board was indescribable. One married couple cut their own throats in order that they might die together. The ship's surgeon encouraged those in the rigging to hold fast, telling them the Sultan would soon rescue them, but several became delirious and let go their hold. The surgeon subsequently leaped into the sea, saying he would "make an end of it."

Several persons were killed by the collision itself, owing to the flying about of splinters and planks. A passenger in the shrouds begged his neighbors to push him into the sea, he being too much chilled to move himself. They refused to do so, when he let himself fall headlong into the waves. One elderly woman, holding her bible in her cramped hands and singing loudly funeral hymns, was washed away from the deck. Two girls belonging to the Saubian Singing troupe, having secured life-belts, swam about a long time, frantically crying "Help! help! help! save us!" The people in the rigging cried: "Come to the rigging; we can not move!" The girls, half benumbed and no longer able to swim, cried out for the last time: "We can't come," and disappeared beneath the waves.

INQUEST ON THE VICTIMS.

Landlord Antisdel Gives His Testimony to the Jury.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 24.—The inquest on the victims of the Newhall fire was formally commenced yesterday in the jury-room of the municipal court, city hall building. The prosecuting attorney and Coroner Kueppor are conducting the investigation. Only reporters, lawyers, and interested parties are admitted to the room where the inquest is being held. The jury is made up as follows: Robert Davis, aged 68, retired builder; J. B. Thompson, aged 43, a contractor; Daniel Waits, aged 43, minister; T. S. Franey, aged 48, railroader; J. C. Corrigan, aged 58, farmer; and John O'Connell, aged 59 contractor. The deposition of Mr. Blecker was simply a rehearsal of his version of the escape of the Tom Thumb party, his wife and himself. He said that they were not awakened by any person connected with the hotel, and the place was all aflame when they discovered their perilous situation.

Landlord Antisdel being placed on the stand, could give no explanation of the cause, but that the fire was the work of an incendiary. When aroused, the fire had got such headway that all he could do was to save himself and family. When the later was safe, he wanted to return into the building, but was prevented by his sons. He noticed a very strong smell of gas and unbearable heat. This leads him to believe that somebody who set the fire had turned on the gas, and that an explosion of the latter spread the fire with lightning rapidity through all parts of the building.

CONGRESSIONAL WORK.

Iron Tariff, Inter-State Transportation, and the Naval Bill.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Mr. Morrill, at 11 o'clock yesterday, moved to proceed to the consideration of the tariff, saying that if the motion were agreed to, he would assume that the senate preferred to take up the bill early each day rather than hold evening sessions. The motion was adopted without opposition, and the senate began the consideration of the metals schedule.

Mr. Miller of New York, moved to make the duty on iron ore and dross, or residuum from burnt pyrites, $1 per ton, instead of 50 cents, as in the bill. A long argument followed, during which Mr. Beck said he would move to put iron ore and pyrites on the free list.

Mr. Camden moved to make the duty on iron ore 60 cents.

Mr. Maxey gave notice that he would move to strike out the whole paragraph and put the articles embraced in it on the free list—namely, iron ore, dross or residuum from burnt pyrites, pyrites or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing less than 15 per cent. of silica and copper contained therein.

Mr. Brown gave notice that he would move to make the duty on these articles 20 per cent ad valorem.

Pending a vote on Mr. Camden's amendment, the senate held an executive session, and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE.

Mr. Butterworth of Ohio, introduced a bill providing for the appointment of seven commissioners, at $10 per day each, to investigate all questions relating to the establishment and maintenance of a reasonable and just interstate transportation tariff for passengers and freights by railroads or other modes of transportation; referred to the committee on Pacific railroads.

Mr. Young of Ohio, introduced a bill authorizing the president to extend the patent granted for methods for increasing the capacity of oil wells.

Mr. Valentino reported Anderson's agricultural commission bill; referred.

Mr. Ranney, from the committee on elections, reported a resolution in the Jones-Shelley Alabama contested case, directing a special committee of three members to take evidence in the matter.

The house then went into committee of the whole, with Mr. Page in the chair, on the naval bill. After fifteen minutes discussion, Mr. Calkins' amendment for a gradual abolition of the pay corps of the navy, was adopted.

After rejecting several other amendments, the committee passed from the first paragraph of the naval bill, and the clerk read the second paragraph, providing for sea service and for compulsory retirement. Immediately half a dozen members were on their feet with points of order, and a lively debate ensued. The chair overruled the point. An appeal was taken, but the decision was sustained—85 to 64.

Mr. Blount raised a point of order against the clause making sea service a pre-requisite of promotion. The chair sustained the point.

Mr. Robeson offered an amendment to the retirement clause, providing that it shall be in effect only until the limit of the reduction in the line which was fixed by the act of Aug. 5, 1882. A long discussion followed upon the question of attaching general legislation to appropriation bills.

Mr. Curtin of Pennsylvania, offered an amendment, providing that the provision of the retirement clause shall not apply to officers of the navy who served in the late civil war.

Messrs. Robeson and Curtin's amendments were both adopted, but the whole retirement clause, as amended, was, on motion of Mr. Calkins, of Indiana, stricken from the bill without division.

Mr. Knott, of Kentucky, offered an amendment providing that promotions shall be made according to seniority. Adopted.

Mr. Talbot, of Maryland, offered an amendment requesting the president to select from the army and navy five officers, to constitute a board for the purpose of examining and reporting to congress which of the navy-yards and arsenals is best adapted to establish a government foundry for the manufacture of guns adapted to modern warfare, together with an estimate of the cost of a steam hammer of strength sfficient to manufacture guns of large caliber. Adopted.

Mr. Ellis of Louisiana, offered an amendment authorizing the secretary of the navy to constitute and introduce as part of the equipment of the navy the life-saving dress adopted by the life-saving service. Adopted.

After completing the consideration of fourteen of the other twenty-six pages of the bill, the committee rose.

The French Republic Abandoned by Its Ablest Counselors.

Resignation of All but Three of the Ministers---The Cause of the Trouble.

The Sensation Created by the Presence of Ex-Empress Eugenie at Paris.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—A cabinet council was held at which, it is reported, the members of the cabinet tendered their resignations. None of the ministers attended the bureaux of deputies yesterday.

The differences in the cabinet arise from a discussion of the third clause in the government expulsion bill, allowing the government to place the Orleans princes now in active service on the retired list. It is understood the minister of war refuses adhesion, while it is affirmed the other members of the cabinet favor Ballues' more stringent amendment decreeing immediate cashiering of the princes. The latter's harsh enactment is a stumbling block over which the ministry promises to break up before long.

The Duclerc cabinet is virtually defunct. The political panic is unabated, and the fundholders are throwing their stocks on the market. The want of a guiding star is universally felt. The possibility of a military pronunciamento is freely talked of. Throughout the bourgeois class there is a reaction against the regime of doctors and journalists, and a yearning for the saving sword. It is certain that the chambers will adopt Floquet's proposal. Gambetta's death has thrown the whole working machine of France out of gear.

It is certain a ministerial crisis in imminent. The idea of having Prince Jerome tried by the senate appears to have been abandoned. Prince Jerome wanted to see a whole troop of friends under the pretext that they were his counsel. The judge d'instruction has allowed Jolibois, the Bonapartist deputy, to act as his counsel, also making three advocates, but he has intimated that this will be the last. The police made a search in the office of The Petit Corporal for a manuscript article which appeared in that paper urging the Imperialists to be active and pressing in proclaiming Prince Victor emperor of France.

At the third cabinet council, at 9 yesterday morning, matters were left practically unsettled. The cabinet will reach a decision this morning. Late Tuesday evening it was announced that all the ministers, except Du Clerc, Billet and Jaurreguliberry had resigned. In case the present cabinet is indefinitely overturned, a Freycinet-Floquat ministry is spoken of.

It is hardly possible to overrate the dangerous character this ministerial crisis has assumed. Three cabinet councils occurred Tuesday. When the news came that the special committee showed a majority against the government, the ministers of war and marine again resigned. President Grevy urged them not to resign. He said: "You are a soldier and you are a sailor. I am quite sure you would never desert your posts under fire, but if you retire now and leave me without a cabinet that would be desertion."

There was a kind of panic on the bourse. The events, following Prince Napoleon's manifesto, the restlessness in the chamber of deputies, the uncertainty of the fate of the government bills, and the newspaper denunciations have disturbed the public mind, and created disquietude among the propertied class. Holders of rentes and other securities have thrown them on the market, fearing that revolutionary measures may depreciate them. Even President Grevy seems to have been affected by the recent scare, as a guard has been stationed at the garden entrance of the Elysees, with muskets loaded with ball cartridges.

The ex-empress Eugenie announces that she ignores the republic, and comes to Paris to display her sympathy with Prince Jerome. Her presence is a topic almost as exciting as the arrest of the prince. It is said that Eugenie was cognizant of the manifesto. Her adherents claim that her presence means a demonstration in behalf of the family of Napoleon.

A subscription has been opened in aid of the families of the condemned Monarchists.

The ex-empress is staying at the Hotel du Rhin, in the very apartments occupied by Napoleon before his election as president. To an interviewer she said: "I have come to France, using my right to testify to Napoleon, a prisoner, my sympathy and forgetfulness of all past discords. I also come to comfort Princess Mathilde. What I am doing is only a family affair. I will make no political manifestations in the presence of the government of which I know nothing." The rooms at the hotel are taken for a week in the name of Countess Pierreford. Many noted Bonapartists flock to the Hotel du Rhin. It is stated that both Eugenie and the Princess Mathilde have received polite hints that they would do well to betake themselves out of the country. Another authority says: The ex-empress wishes it distinctly understood that her presence in France at the present juncture must not be interpreted as having any political significance. De Cassagnac writing in The Pays says: "The empress with chivalrous generosity has forgotten Prince Jerome's past — his revolt, intrigues, and ambitions—and merely considered her place where the name of Napoleon was being persecuted. This step by an admirable, noble woman, is perfectly natural and logical."

JOURNALISTIC.

Negotiations for the Sale of The New York World.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—There have been rumors in newspaper circle in New York for several days which, though as yet unconfirmed, bear some semblance of truth. It is reported that the proprietors of The World newspaper having been offered a proper price have concluded to sell that journal to John R. McLean, of The Cincinnati Enquirer. It has been an open secret in New York for many months that Mr. McLean desired to purchase this property. Hitherto, however, the price could not be agreed upon, the figures asked by The World proprietors being considered above the proper price. The business of the last year having, it is said, proved unsatisfactory to The World proprietors, and the editor-in-chief desiring to make a change, the sale is now said to have been agreed upon. The price is said to have been $325,000, and George Alfred Townsend will take editorial supervision.

Freddy.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Fred Gebhardt was expected to arrive here yesterday by the 3:30 train, but up to 10 o'clock last night he had not put in an appearance. He has telegraphed to the Hotel Brunswick, where he lived, that he would have no further use for his apartments in the hotel, and his personal effects have been removed and placed in storage.

Our Canuck Neighbors' Ice Carnival.

MONTREAL, Jan. 24.—The ice carnival opened here yesterday with clear and cold weather, the thermometer being at zero. The festival commenced with the contractors' drive, and there were over 200 sleighs in line in the procession American guests took part in the opening ceremonies. The influx of visitors is very large.

In the afternoon there was a curling contest on the St. Lawrence, and the coasting track was inaugurated by five thousand young people.

An Advance for Sherman and Hancock.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Mr. Steele of Indiana has introduced in the house a bill to suspend the operation of the proviso of section 1,094, revised statutes, so as to authorize the president to fill any vacancy which may occur in the office of general or lieutenant general of the army through death, resignation or retirement. The effect of the measure, in case of the death, resignation or retirement of Gen. Sherman will be to advance Gen. Sheridan to the generalship of the army, and probably Hancock to the place of lieutenant general.

SUING FOR DAMAGES.

Proceedings in the Gougar-Mandler Slander Suit at Lafayette, Indiana.

LAFAYETTE, Jan. 24.—It was an opinion often expressed that the Gougar-Mandler slander suit would never reach a trial, and that if it ever did come to a trial it would be on a cold day, and so it was. The case was set for the 22d inst. Judge Gould, of Carroll county was unable to reach the city until too late for a morning session of court. He called court at half-past 1 in the afternoon, with all the available space occupied by curious spectators. Mrs. Gougar appeared in court with her husband and was the only woman present. It has been the expression that in its conduct the case would be a bitter and relentless fight between the lawyers, and such, indeed will be the character of the trial as indicated by the proceedings so far. The bar is largely represented. Its ablest members are employed in the case. Mrs. Gougar is represented by Wilson & Adams, R. P. & J. C. Davidson, W. De-Witt Wallace and Colonel R. P. Debart, Mr. Mandler, the defendant, is championed by Coffroth & Stuart, S. F. McHugh and B. W. Langdon. The usual difficulty of obtaining a jury was obviated by what is termed a "struck jury." A selection of forty citizens was made by the county clerk. Each side had struck off twelve, leaving sixteen, the first twelve of whom constituted the jury. The defense objected to the jury, on the ground that one of the forty was not qualified, as he was a non-resident of Indiana. Several other objections were made, but they were overruled.

Judge Coffroth, in his opening statement to the jury, said that Mrs. Gougar sued Capt. Mandler and charged him with saying that she and Capt. Wallace on Sunday night, Nov. 19, went to Wallace's office and committed adultery. Capt. Mandler admitted the words, and further says that Mrs. Gougar had the reputation of being an adulteress.

A great deal of attention has been attracted to the case on account of the prominence of the parties interested. The trial will probably last ten or twelve days. Mrs. Gougar is the editress of a prominent temperance and womans' suffrage paper, and is quite well known in the lecture field.

There was increased attendance on the Gougar-Mandler slander suit yesterday, but the audience was greatly disappointed, as no testimony was received. The lawyers consumed the forenoon in stating the case to the jury. Mandler's attorney stated that they would prove Wallace's presence at Mrs. Gougar's home during her husband's absence; that they had frequent meetings, and on previous occasions they had been seen to visit Wallace's office, remaining some time. The plaintiff will set up that there was a conspiracy formed to traduce and smirch her character, and that on the night when the act is alleged to have been committed she was at another place. All the afternoon with the exception of about ten minutes was occupied in arguing law points, on the part of the plaintiff, the desire being to exclude all testimony not bearing directly on the suit at bar. The defendant has already summoned over fifty witnesses, and the case is likely to be lengthy. Most of Wednesday will be devoted to argument. Many ladies attended yesterday, accompanying the plaintiff.

SIXTY HOURS IN WATER.

Only Five of a Party of Twenty-seven Workmen Escape from a Flooded Mine.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 21.—On the morning of Dec. 12 a great flood of water broke into the old workings in the Australian gold mine at Creswich, where there were thirty-nine miners at work. In a few minutes the lower levels were flooded while the waters rose thirty feet in the shaft. The twelve men who were employed at that point fled for their lives along the drift to a station, which they reached in safety. They were hoisted to the surface in a cage which was lowered to them. The twenty-seven men in the other parts of the workings were unable to reach the shaft, and the only hope was that they might be able to reach and ascend a distant winze leading to an upper level. The scene at the top of the shaft was pitiful. Mothers, wives, children and friends gathered there, waiting, almost without hope, for news from below. Pumps throwing 44,000 gallons per hour were started at once, and all the miners in the district assembled to render assistance.

The body of the water was so great that the pumps lowered it very slowly. On the afternoon of the 13th the water was only breast high in the drift, where the men were supposed to be, and an attempt was made to reach them but the vitiated air drove the relief party back. On the morning of the 14th two searchers came up the shaft cheering, and reported that near winze No. 11 they had heard the words: "It's all right. We are all right." Word soon came up a shaft that the lost had been found. Tanks were improvised as carriages on which to raise the men to the surface, and about half an hour later John Manney was brought up alive. He had been caught while going to warn his comrades of the danger when he might have escaped. Soon four others were brought up, all greatly exhausted, but in a fair way to recover. When the cage rose again the terrible truth was learned that the remaining twenty-two had perished. The whole party had been caught in the drift water, which had risen so high that only by clinging to timbers could they keep their chin above water. One by one during the sixty hours struggle they had dropped off exhausted, and been drowned in the flood, the strongest only holding out until relief came.

FRANK JAMES.

The Case of the State of Missouri Against the Bandit Withdrawn.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 24.—Frank James was brought here from Independence yesterday, and shortly after 3 o'clock his case was called in the criminal court. The first indictment presented was for complicity in the murder of Witcher, the Pinkerton detective, in 1874. Prosecuting Attorney Wallace stated that diligent search of the state had been unable to secure evidence to established the defendant's connection with that murder, therefore he entered a motion to dismiss the case. The indictment for the Independence bank robbery of 1878 was then presented, and the prosecution was obliged to dismiss it also for the same reason. The two cases were accordingly dismissed. The prosecution then presented an indictment which had not before been announced, charging Frank James with robbing H. A. Fox, an express messenger, of $500 in September, 1881, commonly known as the Blue Cut train-robbery. The prosecuting attorney said that the state would require some time to secure evidence in the new case, and the defense stated that they would also require considerable time in preparing for trial, as they had received no previous notice of the indictment. After a brief discussion the case was continued until the next term in Kansas City, which begins the fourth Monday in May, and the court announced the bail fixed at $3,500. The defense was not ready to give bond immediately, and the prisoner was accordingly remanded to jail and taken back to Independence on the evening train. The great bandit declines to be interviewed. He has nothing to say, but seems to think he will be a free man. He would not say what he would do to the Ford brothers, the slayers of his brother Jesse, when he gets loose. It is thought that no requisition to take him to any other state will be granted by the governor.

Versatility, Variety and Vim.

New York Tribune.

Young gentlemen in the colleges who are beguiling the sad realities of senior year with dreams of future literary distinction may find it to their advantage to consider the seductive offer of The Oconee (Ga.) Monitor, which advertises for a partner; one who can "edit a paper, and quarrel, and fight, and play politician or non-politician, collect money and at the same time pretend that he don't want it. Who can run a newspaper without money as well as with it, who can print a paper so loud that a deaf and dumb person can read it before it gets out of the postoffice. Who can get up a paper that will never get lost in the mails, nor be borrowed by deadheads, nor grumbled at by soreheads. Who can run a paper to suit all the different whims of subscribers. Who knows more about the newspaper business than Horace Greeley did. We want a man who will fight with a big nigger for a subscription. In fact, we want a man who can blow hot and cold at the same time. Who can carry water on both shoulders. Who can bark with the dogs, and run with the rabbits".

'Why are so Many Horses Cross and Snappish?"

Boston Globe.

"Why? Because the fools are not all dead yet."

"Horses hate to be 'pecked' at. Some men are afraid of horses, and the animals know it; they despise 'em, and are cross only to those who have no business with them. But horses are made cross by the way they are treated. If they have kind usage they become gentle; it rough they respond in the same way.

"I have become so well-versed in horses that I can read their thoughts, and when I am in their company I know very quickly just what they think of me."

"You recognize, then, the reasoning power in horses?"

"Most decidedly, sir. When I select a horse for my school I pick out those that exhibit wit. I go a good deal by the formation of the head and the brightness of the eye. Horses have ambition and show it in their make-up. When I put the horse in the school I begin by finding out the disposition. Then they go into a kindergarten and learn the simplest things first."

GUSTAVE DORE.

Death of the Famous French Painter and Sculptor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—A cable dispatch from Paris announces the death of Paul Gustave Doro, the celebrated artist. He was born at Strasburg, Jan. 6, 1832, and was educated partially in the schools of that place, completing his studies at Paris. At an early age he contributed comic sketches to The Journal Pour Rire, and gradually ventured upon greater works. In 1855 he exhibited three pictures which were pronounced remarkable for one of his age, and in 1857 produced a heroic picture called "The Battle of Inkerman". He was the most German in style of any of the prominent French artists, and won world-wide fame as the illustrator of Rabelais. Another great work, and one familiar to the people of all countries, was his illustrations of the "Wandering Jew." The illustrations of Dante's "Divina Commedia," and the remarkable pictures descriptive of Don Quixote bear the name of Dore, and are very familiar. In 1866 he presented illustrations of the bible and of Milton, which were of the highest excellence. Many of his principal pictures since 1870, were exhibited in the Dore gallery, in London. At the Paris exposition, in 1878, he exhibited a colossal vase ornamented with 150 figures. One of his latest works was a sculptural group, "The Prize of Glory," a young hero dying beneath the kiss of glory. He was decorated with the cross of the legion of honor, Aug. 15, 1861.

Harper Bros., New York, are engaged in printing Poe's "Raven," with elaborate illustrations by Doro. Recently the great artist has been engaged on illustrations of Shakspeare, and ere he died he had finished the monument to the elder Dumas, which is considered one of the greatest works of art produced in modern time. For many years M. Doro has been conceded the first place in the ranks of French painter-sculptors.

A DEADLY DASH.

Plunge of a Coal Train on a West Virginia Road Over a Precipice--Seven Men Killed.

KEYSER, W. Va., Jan. 24.—One of the most terrible and fatal railroad accidents that ever occurred in this part of the country happened on the George's Creek & Cumberland railroad, running from Cumberland to Lanaconing, yesterday. It seems that three coal trains, consisting of three locomotives, fifty-two hoppers and seventeen gondolas, all loaded, started from Cumberland about 2 o'clock, all coupled together, one engine in front, another in the middle, and one in the rear, this being the safest way to get down grades this bad weather. In going down one of the steep grades, about ten miles from Cumberland, they started down the steep incline at a fearful rate of speed. The trains kept the track until they got on to a trestle-work, having a reverse curve. The front engine flew the track, dragging all the men, sixty-nine cars, and locomotives after it, all going, rolling and tumbling down a steep hill, which was between eighty and one hundred feet high, on to the tracks of the Eckhart branch of the Cumberland & Pennsylvania railroad. Seven dead bodies were found amid the wreck, and more are missing. Each train consisted of a conductor, two brakemen, fireman and engineer—in all fifteen human beings, not one of whom can be found alive to tell the fearful tale. It is supposed the other bodies are either among the wreck or the men jumped to save their lives, and are lying down the mountain somewhere, either dead or badly hurt, and, if exposed to a night like this, they will surely freeze to death. The loss will fall heavily on this road, it being recently built.

The Keystone of Health.

How can you expect to feel well, or even enjoy life, when you go about with a hacking cough? The fool, in his wisdom, says there is no cure for it, but the wise man hies him to Stearns & Baker's drugstore, and gets a bottle of Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, and at once gets well. WORK AND YOU WON'T GO WRONG.

For many and many a weary year
John Benson struggled along,
And a simple motto was all his plan,
"Work on, and you won't go wrong!"

You see he was only a commonplace man,
And he worked in a commonplace way,
But commonplace honesty was his rule,
And a day's work every day.

But little by little his trade increased,
And his fortune slowly grew;
And he slowly gathered a pleasant host
Of friends both kind and true.

He made no foes, for all he did
He never gave cause for blame,
Till people were glad through all the town
To honor John Benson's name.

He ne'er had struggled for fame or place,
And greatly surprised was he
When the people chose him from all the rest
At the head of the town to be.

And a commonplace man, for his commonplace worth,
Has been their selectman long.
And he might have chosen a motto worse
Than "Work and you won't go wrong!"

—N. Y. Ledger.

MOCK AUCTIONS.

There is a red flag at the door. The room is always small, with an office at one end where the swindled purchaser pays for what he buys, and so situated as to protect the shillaber in his sham purchase or the victim from the gaze of the crowd, for it is not prudent to have two "guys" at a time at the cashier's desk. The auctioneer, whose buzz-saw voice attracts the passers-by, is selling a watch. It is what the "shillabers" call an "s. g. watch," meaning a silver-gilt watch. The auctioneer dare not guarantee it as solid gold, for such a statement would be sufficient to send him to the penitentiary. He says: "These cases are solid 18-carat gold on a coin base," or, "The gold on these cases is 18-carat gold." The listener does not pause to think that one sentence is a meaningless jumble of words, or that the second sentence merely guarantees the gilding which will wear off in a few weeks. There are three "shillabers" present. The watch is handed to the "guy." One of the "shallabers" examines the cases, and in a non-committal way drops a casual remark to the effect that the cases are 18-carat gold. The victim, whose confidence has probably been gained by the shillaber, or who has possibly asked that individual for an opinion, jumps at the conclusion that the watch is a gold one, and that the auctioneer has guaranteed it as such. Probably the auctioneer starts the watch at $1, saying, "I do this to show you that the sale is fair, and that there are no cappers or bidders here." He does this safely, knowing that the shillabers will take care of the article. One of the shillabers bids against the countryman. Signals that are never perceived by the uninitiated are exchanged between the auctioneer and the two confederates who are "working the guy.', It is known to a certainty just how much imposition the victim will stand. As long as the bidder "stands in his tracks," he is "good for more." If he takes a few steps backward it is a certain sign that he is not willing to advance more money, the movement manifestly indicating his determination to stop. This is invariable when the guy does not himself state to one of the shillabers, "I will bid no more." Finally, the silver-gilt watch is knocked down to him at a profit of $15 or $20 to the shop.

"This, gentlemen," cries the auctioneer, "is a solid coin-silver watch." He puts up such a watch, either a hunting-case or an open-face, and after it has reached a respectable figure he fumbles in the case and brings forth an open-faced watch, saying: "Perhaps, gentlemen, you prefer an open-faced watch, and I will give you the choice." The solid silver watch is then run up to $18 or $20 by the shillabers, and one of them takes it, leaving the white-metal watch exposed on the case. The latter is then knocked down at $12 or $15 to a guy, who naturally thinks that the representation of solid silver applied in both instances, and who therefore supposes that he has a bargain. The actual value of the second watch, which is palmed off on the victim for $12, is $2.80. It will be seen that this swindle is perfect. No misrepresentation is made, and even the man who was taken in never finds out how the thing was done.

One of the shrewdest schemes practiced by the shillabers is what is known as "stuffing watches." A man, who seems to be the picture of distress, rushes in and asks the auctioneer to sell a watch for him. He is one of the experts. The auctioneer asks him: "Why don't you go to a pawnshop?" "Oh, they want everything or nothing," is the reply, "and I must sell this now, for my wife is sick, and there is nothing to eat in the house." The feelings of the crowd are worked upon in this manner, and the chances are that the "suckers" smell a bargain and tumble into the trap like flies into a sugar-bowl. If the bidding is not active enough, however, it is easily stimulated. The watch is going for $25, when the fellow who brought it, and whose eyes are probably filled with tears, cries: "Oh, I can't let it go for that; I paid $50 for it." "Bid it in yourself, then," cries the auctioneer, and the agitated shillaber says "Forty dollars."

"Sold," exclaims the auctioneer; "give us four dollars."

"What for?" asks the shillaber, in assumed astonishment.

"Why, for selling it, of course. Do you think we do business for you for nothing?"

The shillaber expostulates wildly, but in vain.

"Gentlemen," cries the auctioneer, "I'll sell this watch for the commission," and the chances are that the worthless watch is sold for not less than $35. This trick is one that never fails. Cases have been known where countrymen in the auction-shops even opened their purses and offered money to the weeping shillaber, whose apparent misery had touched their hearts.

A favorite trick is to put up what the auctioneer calls "aluminum" watches. "Gentlemen," he says, "aluminum is the dross of gold; it is the coarse gold that is left after the precious metal has been refined at the mint. None can tell it from solid gold, unless it be cut with a jeweler's saw." This tickles a countryman who has never heard of such a thing as "dross of gold," but who, naturally, imagines that it must be something very fine.

The "slang racket" is somewhat funnier but no less effective than the others. By "slang" is meant a chain. A gold watch is a "yellow super," and a white watch a "white super." The auctioneer takes a tray of chains and exclaims, with peculiar rapid utterance, "Gentlemen, there's no chain in this collection but what cost less than from $5 to $10." The word "less" is never noticed, and, if it is, the spectator simply thinks that the auctioneer has made an unintentional mistake.

There is what is known as "capping" a watch, and it is done in this manner: A shillaber bids in a valuable watch for $65. Then the auctioneer puts up a worthless timepiece. The shillaber looks at the second with admiration, and asks the auctioneer: "Mister, will you take this back if I buy that one?" The auctioneer says: "Certainly; we'll allow you what you paid on the first." The shillaber thereupon bids, and the second watch that has been so dexterously "capped up" reaches a higher figure than the one first offered.

One night in one of the shops a shillaber had been so active in the bidding as to make himself an object of suspicion, but his conduct was quickly turned to the benefit of the shop. The auctioneer, pointing to him, said: "There gentlemen, is a man who is here every night. He is a pawnbroker from the West side, and if he can afford to come here and buy watches to sell again to his customers you may be certain that there are bargains for you." This can hardly be called throwing dust in the eyes of the crowd; it is plastering mud on with a trowel.

"This, gentlemen," says the auctioneer sometimes, "is a filled watch. It is not filled with German silver, or with lead, but with solid coin silver." The crowd naturally supposes that the yellow cases are of gold, and are filled with silver, while as a matter of fact it is simply a silver watch gold-washed.

Sometimes when a white-metal watch is put up a "guy" who is inclined to be curious, asks: "Do you call this a silver watch?" The auctioneer replies. "Yes, sterling." He does not say "sterling silver." He leaves it for the imagination of his victim to supply the word "silver," and therefore he is not tenchnically guilty of misrepresentation.—Chicago Times.

Joy, Joy to the World.

If you meet a man who looks as if he had lost all his friends, had his house burned down and business destroyed, just make up your mind that he either has dyspepsia or his liver is out of order. The best thing you can do for such a woebegone individual is to advise him to go to Stearns & Baker's drug store and get a bottle of Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which will cure him without fail. Also an infallible remedy for pimples and blotches on the face. Only 50 cents a bottle.

"Don't Hurry, Gentlemen."

Said a man on his way to be hanged "there'll be no fun till I get there." We say to the dyspeptic, nervous, and debilitated, don't hurry thoughtlessly for some remedy of doubtful merit, uncertain of relief, when you can get at the druggists for one dollar Burdock Blood Bitters almost sure to cure and certain to benefit.

An Imperial Schoolmaster.

A charming trait is related of the German Crown Prince. He and the Crown Princess often visit the village schools of Bornstedt and Eiche, near Potsdam. On Wednesday last he unexpectedly made his appearance at the Bornstedt school, and entered the room occupied by the third class for the purpose of seeing a new master, of whose method of teaching his Imperial Highness wished to judge in person. He then proceeded into the next room for the purpose of inspecting the first class, and hardly entered it when a messenger arrived with a telegram summoning the master (Mr. Mathias) to come to his mother, then dying in a village near Spandau. The Crown Prince insisted that the master should instantly depart in obedience to the last request of his mother. "But how can I leave the children?" objected the master. "Never mind," answered the Prince, "I will take the class till eleven o'clock, when the Vicar comes to prepare candidates for confirmation. Run away, and may you find your mother still alive!" Thus were the Bornstedt children examined for a whole hour in history by the heir to the throne, who possesses an intimate knowledge of the great Reformation period, and gave his pupils the benefit of it. When the clock struck eleven he drove up to the vicarage, intimated the departure of Mr. Mathias to the Vicar, and announced his intention of being present during the religious instruction. He staid until the end, listening attentively and freely distributing praise where it was merited. Before leaving he promised the school a new set of Bibles, instead of the superannuated copies at present in its possession.—Berlin Cor. London Daily News.

—"Acute Americanitis" is the name given by an English medical writer to a disease said to be produced in Englishmen by visits to this country. According to this harmless romancer the symptoms developed by one of the sufferers are that he is "thinner, taller, lank-jawed and sallow, with a loss of weight of thirty pounds." These difficulties are supposed to show themselves after a six weeks' residence in America, but, subside rapidly after the unfortunate's return to England.

—A farmer on a New York railroad managed not to pay his fare until the train arrived opposite his farm house, when the conductor put him off. As he left the car he slapped the conductor on the back and exclaimed: "By gosh, you are the best fellow I ever saw. That is my house up there, and if you will stop the next time you come round I will give you a drink of milk."

A GOOD INDICATION.—No practitioner in any of the professions, can year after year, do business in any locality without inspiring confidence by reason of his success or else proving that his pretensions to skill are groundless, and the best evidence that Drs. Price & Brewer are skillful physicians, is to be found in the fact that for many years they have visited various localities in this State—and each year their reputation for success has been growing brighter. There must be merit to command such confidence. Dr. Brewer may be consultd at the Myers House in this city on Saturday the 27th of January. Consultations free.

The revival meetings were continued last week at College Chapel and the Methodist and Congregational churches, the effort being a union one on the part of all denominations. The interest, which had its inception in the conference of the young mens' college christian association, under the leadership of Secretary Wishard and others, has increased since the conference closed and a large number of students and others have risen for prayers and joined the association. —One of the most successful young men Rock county has given to the railway world, is Mr. A. P. Robinson, of whose success many notices have appeared in the Gazette. It is announced that he will as chief engineer of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad and leased lines, Leavenworth, Topeka and Southwestern railway, Manhattad, Alma and Burlingame railway, New Mexido and Arizona railroad, and Sonora railway (limited), will have charge of the track, bridge, building, and water-service department, and all matters pertaining to the office of the chief engineer of these railways.

A Man's a Man for a' that.

The arrangments for the Burns entertainment to-morrow evening are nearly completed, and it promises to be a grand affair in every detail. Supper will be served promptly at half past seven o'clock and it is requested that every one intending to be present will be there at that time.

By order of the committee.

The Courts.

The arguments in the Magnolia school district case were made in the circuit court this morning. Hon. John Winans and O. H. Fethers appeared for the plaintiff, and John W. Sale and Ed. F. Carpenter for the defendants. At three o'clock this afternoon, Judge Sloan, before whom the case was tried, had not announced his opinion.

The divorce case of Lord vs. Lord is next on the court calendar, and will probably be disposed of this afternoon.

In the municipal court to-day George Bond was up on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, and was fined $10 and costs, $4.58, which was paid.

Edward Nelson was found guilty on the charge of drunkenness, and was fined one dollar and costs, $4.45.

Maggie Mitchell and Fanchon.

When Maggie Mitchell plays Fanchon she compasses it in a style so natural, so perfect, that language halts in its expression. It would be folly to attempt to criticise her, she is so far ahead of any other actress who ever tried to act Fanchon, that wherever she goes she finds nothing but success, enthusiasm, and praise. For more than twenty years Maggie Mitchell has made the theater-goers of this country pay attention to her, and as years went by her success increased, her reputation widened, and to-day she is as dramatically effective and as artistically admirable, as in the days when she first gained her great conquests on the stage. Those who saw her last night and had seen her years ago, in Fanchon, found that time had really brought no change. Throughout that touching little story—a story of mirth mingled with sadness—she commanded the sympathy of her audience, and seemed to have their moods at will. The shadow dance was touchingly and beautifully done and the enthusiasm of the audience brought her before the curtain at the close of the act. She was recalled at the end of the third act each time being received with well-rounded applause. Then again, her voice which has not lost any of its charm, is still controlled by remarkable skill, and its changes to suit her ever varying moods in the play, brought out irresistible laughter. She was so thoroughly good that those who were there to be moved by her powers, will ever associate the scenes of last night among their pleasantest recollections of the stage.

The support was exceedingly good, and if space would permit, several might be complimented without prejudice to the others. There was an evenness about the support that made the play run very smoothly. We are also glad that the audience found the opera house very comfortably warmed. The best actress in the country couldn't raise the enthusiasm of an audience if the room was cold. But Maggie's charming powers and a pleasant temperature, made the entertainment one of the most enjoyable ever witnessed at Myers opera house.

The Weather.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVENSON, DRUGGISTS.

At seven o'clock this morning the thermometer registered 2 degrees below zero, and at one p. m. at 13 degrees above. Partly cloudy with a southwest wind.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24, 1 a. m.—The following are the indications for to-day:

Lake Region—Warmer, cloudy weather, with snow, winds mostly southerly, and generally lower pressure.

Uncle Tom.

It won't surprise people to learn that Uncle Tom's Cabin will be given here on Friday evening, at Myers opera house. Time-worn as it is, it still draws well, and if the people will continue to go and see it, managers don't object, and therefore keep it on the stage. About the one coming here Friday, the Philadelphia Record says:

C. H. Smith's Mammoth Double troupe presented "Uncle Tom's Cabin," last night in a style of unexampled splendor. Everything is on the greatest scale. The company includes two Topsys, two Markses, a pack of blood hounds, a troupe of jubilee singers, and a wealth of stage effect. The realistic, if time-worn, scenes of the play attracted a full audience, in which, as usual, the juvenile element predominated. The acting was equal to the requirements of the drama, and the blood-hounds and donkeys received the most enthusiastic applause.

The public schools of the city will reopen to-morrow morning. By order of the board of education.

C. E. BOWLES, clerk.

The Portable Electric Lighter.

From the New York Real Estate Chronicle, December 16, 1882.

At last we can have the electric light where it can do the most good. That is to say we can put it now on our desks, on our tables, on our mantle-pieces, anywhere in fact where a clear, bright, safe lighter is wanted. The portable electric lighter, patented in 1879 and again in 1882, is now before us, and we look at it with surprise and happiness. Surprise, because it is evident how great a progress we have made in the science of electricity; happiness, because it gives us a clearer, better, more movable light than any we have ever enjoyed.—Here is a lamp, so called, occupying only the space of five square inches, which can be carried anywhere, and is besides an ornament. By simply pressing upon the knob to the full extent of the spring, (which connects with the battery,) an electric current is produced by which the spiral of platinum is heated to incandescence and the light is instantaneous. The material lasts about two months and can then be renewed at a small cost through any chemist. It will not be long before everybody will have a portable electric lighter. The price, $5, is so low that it cannot fail to become popular at once. The principal office is at 22 Water Street, Boston where all applications for this most novel lamp should be sent.

Emerald Grove.

—If the weather has not been cold for the last few days, it has been no fault of the thermometer. At the Grove it registered for three successive mornings (Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday) from 28 to 30 degrees below zero, during the day from ten to fifteen below zero. Out on the prairie some themometers indicated 34 to 36 degrees below. The intense cold has suspended nearly all business and travel. Farmers have had their hands full taking care of their stock.

—Last Subbath, the two congregations united in a single service and very few present at that. The evening service was not held.

—Our resident ministers failed to meet their afternoon appointments on account of the severity of the weather and the snow drifts.

—A pleasant little gathering was held at Mrs. L. Spear's on Monday evening. It was a surprise party given to Mrs. Spear in honor of her sixtieth birthday. The severe cold hindered a number of invited guests from being present.

—We acknowledge receipt of copies of the "Birmingham Daily Age" Alabama, sent by Miss Susan Scott who, with her mother is spending the winter there with her brother Wm. L. Scott. The paper speaks of a recent snow fall as quite a rarity in that region.
